

Wisconsin Works (W-2) Successes

Kim enrolled in the W-2 program after being forced to leave her home and main support system behind after her father's unexpected passing.

Kim never finished her high school education, had no child care for her daughter, no income, no car, and no independent housing.

After 9 months of hard work and the assistance of her employment coordinator, Kim has successfully achieved all of these things.

“Nicole has worked hard to restructure her life to work around her restrictions instead of letting them be in control.”

Nicole had been experience back pain since August 2014, but thought it was something minor so avoided the doctor until November 2014. That is when she found out how bad her back truly was and was scheduled for emergency surgery.

Since the surgery last winter, Nicole has had to restructure her 'normal' life and her job no longer became an option.

She decided that instead of going on disability she was going to find employment that would allow her accommodations.

Nicole co-enrolled in the WCI's WIA and W-2 programs and also began working on her GED. She has also begun to look at tech school programs to further her education.

Wisconsin Works (W-2) Successes

Kim enrolled in the W-2 program after being forced to leave her home and main support system behind after her father's unexpected passing.

Kim never finished her high school education, had no child care for her daughter, no income, no car, and no independent housing.

After 9 months of hard work and the assistance of her employment coordinator, Kim has successfully achieved all of these things.

“Nicole has worked hard to restructure her life to work around her restrictions instead of letting them be in control.”

Nicole had been experience back pain since August 2014, but thought it was something minor so avoided the doctor until November 2014. That is when she found out how bad her back truly was and was scheduled for emergency surgery.

Since the surgery last winter, Nicole has had to restructure her 'normal' life and her job no longer became an option.

She decided that instead of going on disability she was going to find employment that would allow her accommodations.

Nicole co-enrolled in the WCI's WIA and W-2 programs and also began working on her GED. She has also begun to look at tech school programs to further her education.